

The pending proposal to stop regulating broadband service would be yet another blow to competition in our area. I had DSL service from the local RBOC, and in addition to having it go out frequently, the service was terrible. So I changed to a small ISP who leases space from the RBOC, and have been very pleased.

As we only have two ways for wires to come in/out of the house - the telephone wire and the cable wire, this would limit us to two choices for broadband. As we have seen with cable TV, two choices are not enough, and will cost consumers.
